CATERINA PETROFFSKOVA.

OLSHANKA, POLSKA.
THE PALE, SOUTHERN RUSSIA.

Something was wrong with Caterina Petroffskova. Patient, industrious and tireless at 63, she had not worked steadily since dawn. And this was the third day of such unrelenting idleness.

Now, for the hundredth time, she stood in the low doorway shading her wide, grave eyes with a crumpled hand.

Ivan Ivanovich, visitor from a neighboring town, watched her curiously.

"What is it, little mother?" he asked, for her face showed the look of one who seems far horizon.

"Nothing," she said, quietly, "nothing," and stared unseeing down a lane dilapidated log huts, straw-batched and squat as giant fungi. Every izbas seemed deserted, its rude plank door closed against the cold, its naked, shutterless windows unlighted.

Beneath each deep eaves hung a bucket, a ladder, or a coil of rope—sole implement for protection in case of a devastating fire. Across the gable of the farthest cabin a row of unreadable Russian figures announced the number of "souls" in the household, of course, the male inhabitants.

all of them?
For what?

Steadily with heart-straining slowness, the dark spot became a "droisky" (wagon), developed a "yemshik" driving with arms extended.

From still far away his explosive shouts sounded across the street: "Hil' Ivan! Hil' Alexandrovich! It is cold—cold! Let the samovar be bubbling—bubbling!"

Another moment, while the ragged laprobe fell over his exhausted horse, he stepped from the droisky stilly.

"Ay, batinskis (little fathers), why so silent? Trust me to carry good news."

"See this!"
A cramped arm raised a limp leather pouch.

"Look here and be content!"
"It means fine fortune—gladness for all—when I bring Caterina such a heavy American mail!"

And that is Russia—all the pale. There, where the czar-ridden Jews are forced into an unimagined poverty, cruel and horrible, there is but one ray of light: When the "American mail" comes, bringing money from the "young ones" who "emigrated" to the land of the free!

Caterina sent her son to America—he has made a real place for himself and besides, sometimes now Caterina may have vegetables to eat!

Marie: Your shortsightedness and squinting are probably caused by a weak and overworked condition of the eyes. I do not think your eye troubles are serious, but they should be given the careful application of two or three drops at a time of this simple tonic. Dissolve an ounce of erythros in a pint of water. This will be a great comfort as well as a beautifier and will prevent that squinting which is apt to make a woman's face and lines about the eyes. Take my advice; don't worry.

Hilda: There are many methods advocated for reducing the chin, but after all, there is nothing so good as to keep down the general flesh. And this does not require any vigorous dieting or exercising if you can mix at home. Get four ounces of paraffin at the drug store, and dissolve it in 16 pints of water. Take a tablespoonful before meals. It will work magic with the "dreadful double chin" and you will experience no bad effects. High collars should be worn as little as possible. They increase the tendency to flabby throat.

Miss L. G.: Here is a hair tonic which you can prepare at home at small expense and which is a genuine hair grower of the best and simplest kind. Be sure to keep your scalp clean by frequent shampooing with cantharox and then rub into your scalp this tonic, made by dissolving an ounce of quinine in a half pint of alcohol and adding one-half of cold water. For all scalp troubles and badly nourished hair this is an unequalled remedy.

Olivia: I never recommend a hair dye, but unless I am much mistaken about your age, you should not have trouble with faded or gray hair for a long while yet. The best way in the world to stop your hair troubles is to wash with cantharox occasionally. Use a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. It is one of the best things I know of to remove dandruff and prevent brittleness, split ends, and the irritation caused by excess oil. It cleanses thoroughly, and has none of the objectionable

WANTS SCHOOLS USED FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS

Dr. Frederick C. Howe Says Much of New York's Criminals Are Made by Wrong Employment.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The use of public schools outside of school hours as a means of reducing vice and juvenile delinquency is recommended in a report submitted to the board of estimate by Dr. Frederick C. Howe, director of the People's Institute. Writing of the recreational and leisure time needs of the city, Dr. Howe set forth that wrong employment of leisure time has caused much of New York's crime among both adults and children.

The city has invested $135,000,000 in 500 school houses which are used for only six or seven hours a day for five days of the week, Dr. Howe points out. Public lectures, school athletics, dance clubs, neighborhood meetings and branch libraries all should be managed by a single directing agency through the board of education, the report recommends. Entertainments in schools to offset the dance halls, held as responsible for exerting undesirable influence over the young girl, are urged.
